Work has always shaped Bath — but whose work, and whose stories get remembered? This project connects young people with community elders to record oral histories centred on their work in Bath.

ACTIVITIES

Record new Oral histories

Sit down with elders from the community, hear their stories, and make history — literally. Your recordings go into the Museum of Bath at Work archive.

Make Connections

Build relationships across generations. Find out what the elders in your community have seen, done and survived.

Practice Content Creation

Blend oral history with radio and podcast formats. Learn by doing, with real material and real output.

Explore the Future of Work

What does work mean for your generation? Share your aspirations, questions and concerns — and shape the conversation about what comes next.
